American Risk and Insurance Association

A learned society devoted exclusively to furthering the science of risk management and insurance through research, literature, information exchange,
and education

The American Risk and Insurance Association

ARIA strives to expand and improve academic instruction to students of risk management and insurance through an emphasis on the economic, financial, legal, managerial, marketing, and social aspects of risk and uncertainty.

is a worldwide group of academic, professional, and regulatory leaders in insurance, risk management, and related areas, joined together to advance the study and understanding of the field.

Founded in 1932, the organization of more than 1,100 members offers institutions, organizations, vendors, and others an opportunity for meaningful dialogue, discovery, networking, and direct advancement of the industry's intelligence.

ARIA faculty members produce well-educated graduates who become policy makers, consumers, and employees, a fact that has ethical and financial implications for the insurance industry and beyond.

ARIA has members from hundreds of universities throughout the United States, Canada, and elsewhere. ARIA members are the stronghold of academic insurance education, influencing tens of thousands of future insurance professionals and consumers.

Distinctly educational in nature, the organization conducts many activities throughout the year that are designed to help members by creating networking opportunities and forums. Quality seminars, an outstanding annual conference, and other programs provide access to information and opinions from the brightest minds in the insurance and risk management fields. Two distinguished journals promote the development and distribution of knowledge.

ARIA is able to realize its goals in part through the generous support of its sponsors, who recognize that the vitality of the insurance industry is sparked by the advancement of the study of insurance in a noncommercial, scientific setting.

The perpetuation of the industry, of quality standards, and of understanding are realized uniquely through ARIA. The best plan for ensuring responsible insurance standards is well-supported insurance research, study, and instruction.

We hope you will be able to participate as an institutional sponsor. For your involvement, you will receive recognition in ARIA's publications, newsletters, and directory. You will be invited to our annual conference, where you will meet an international group of colleagues who share a common concern for the industry's future. More importantly, you will play a meaningful role in the advancement of the insurance and risk management profession.
